EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This historic neighborhood, nestled between Main Street and the Connecticut River, is an emerging community in downtown Middletown, Connecticut. Continued growth is expected here as construction on a four-star, one hundred-room hotel proceeds in the south end of Main Street, while in the north end, Wesleyan University, the city, and private developers implement a number of arts-oriented developments.

Ferry, Green, and Rapallo Streets are characterized by a compact, vital community, trapped in under-performing real estate. Through stemming the tide of entrenched drug activity, undesirable property management, and poverty, residents in the community have become well-organized and dedicated to the improvement of their neighborhood. Now, with an approved redevelopment plan in place, and in conjunction with the Redevelopment Agency, they are ready to partner with an experienced developer to bring about a physical change of the neighborhood reflective of the social change already underway.

The North End redevelopment process began in earnest approximately six years ago when the Mayor convened an “Urban Homesteading Task Force” which grew into a neighborhood improvement group: the North End Action Team (“NEAT”). Working with city officials, Wesleyan University, and the Yale Urban Design Workshop, NEAT sponsored a community charrette which developed a conceptual plan for revitalizing the Ferry, Green, and Rapallo Streets neighborhood. This plan was reviewed by the City of Middletown Common Council and referred to the Redevelopment Agency. In 2001, the Redevelopment Agency adopted the North End / CBD Urban Renewal Plan, incorporating the conceptual plan initiated by NEAT. This plan was then endorsed by the Common Council last summer.

The plan is on file in the city’s Department of Planning, Conservation, and Development, which department staffs the Redevelopment Agency. Questions can be directed to them, at 860.344.3425. Proposals must be postmarked no later than January 15, 2003.
